LOCHINVAR.

Words by SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Allegretto.

1. O, young Lochin-var is come out of the west, Thro'
2. So boldly he enter'd the Nether-by Hall, Among all the wide bor-der his steed was the best; And save his good broad-sword he bridesmen, and kins-men, and bro-thers, and all; Then spoke the bride's father, his weapon had none, And he rode all un-arm'd, and he rode all a-lone. So hand on his sword, (For the poor craven bridegroom said ne-ver a word,) "O" bride had con - sent-ed, the gallant came late; For a lag - gard in love, and a lead but one measure, drink one cup of wine. There are maidens in Scot - land more dastard in war, Was to wed the fair El - len of brave Lochin - var.

love - ly by far, That would gladly be bride to the young Lochin - var."

The bride heard the goblet; the knight took it up,
He quaff'd off the wine, and he drank down the cup.
She look'd down to blush, and she look'd up to sigh,
With a smile on her lip, and a tear in her eye,
He took her soft hand, ere her mother could bar—
"Now tread we a measure," said young Lochinvar.
So snatch'd his arm, and so lovely his face,
There was never a hall such a gallant did grace;
While her mother did fret, and her father did fume,
And the bridegroom stood gazing, his knees and thumbs;
And the bride maidens whisper'd, "twere better by far
To have match'd our fair cousin with young Lochinvar."

One touch to her hand, and one word to her ear,
When they reach'd the hall-door, and the charger stood near;
So light to the saddle the fair lady he swung,
So light to the saddle before her he sprung!
"She is gone! we are gone, over bank, bush and burn;
They'll have fast steeds that follow," quoth young Lochinvar,
There was mounting, more grimaces of the Satchery clan,
Fowls, Fowls, and Fowls, they rode and they ran;
There was rushing and chasing on Canobie Lee,
But the last bride of Satchery never did they see.
So daring in love, and so dauntless in war,
Have ye e'er heard of gallant like young Lochinvar!
